Angelina's Halloween

Story by Katharine Holabird Illustrations by Helen Craig

PUFFIN BOOKS

Angelina loved the excitement of Halloween. She loved dressing up and trick-or-treating and spent hours with her best friend, Alice, thinking about wonderful costumes. At last they decided to be dancing fireflies and drew beautiful pictures of wings and tiaras.

Angelina's little sister, Polly, wanted to join them. "Look at this," she kept saying, showing them her funny scribbles.

Mrs Mouseling helped them make the delicate costumes, and when the wings and tiaras were done, Angelina and Alice practised flying around and around the cottage.

Polly tried to fly too but kept crashing into Angelina's wings. "Why do you always copy me?" Angelina stamped her foot.

Polly hung her head. "I want wings," she cried.

"You're too little," explained Angelina, "but you could be something really scary."

Mrs Mouseling found a sheet, and Angelina showed Polly how to be a spooky Halloween ghost.
